

I am Sina Sikder — an MIS professional, entrepreneur, and creative storyteller who believes that technology and creativity can coexist beautifully.

Professionally, I work in the garments industry as an MIS Officer, where I am involved in software implementation, ERP operations, and production-side system management. My work focuses on improving operational efficiency through structured processes, technology-driven solutions, and practical problem-solving. Over time, this role has helped me develop strong analytical thinking, workflow management, and system coordination skills.

Alongside my professional career, I am building Sikder Agency — a creative platform where ideas, visuals, emotions, and digital expression come together. Through this journey, I work on storytelling-based content, poetry recitation, visual narratives, and creative digital media that aim to connect with people beyond ordinary content.

Under Sikder Agency, I also founded BiteBari — a homemade food brand built with warmth, creativity, and care. Starting with handcrafted flavored cakes, BiteBari represents more than food; it represents comfort, emotion, and the joy of homemade experiences. My vision is to gradually expand it into a trusted homemade food brand that carries both quality and personality.

Beyond work and business, I am deeply connected to words, emotions, and human experiences. I enjoy poetry, spoken reflections, storytelling, and cinematic-style content creation. Using creative tools like Canva and CapCut, I try to transform thoughts and feelings into visual stories that people can quietly relate to.

I believe meaningful work does not always need noise.
Some creations are meant to inspire softly, speak honestly, and stay with people silently.

Through everything I create — whether through systems, stories, visuals, or food — my goal is simple:
to build things with purpose, sincerity, and emotion.
